There were a few things about life
in Canada that I didn't understand
When I first arrived.

One of them was volunteering.

"Why do people want to work for free?"
I asked myself.

I decided to find out.

Why do people work for free?

First, I asked our school settlement worker, "Why do people volunteer?" She explained, "Volunteering is a great way to meet people and help our community." "Volunteering makes you feel happy," she added.

Next, I asked my teacher,
"Why do people volunteer?"

She said, "Volunteering is a great way to find out about different kinds of jobs and learn new skills."

Then she added, "It can help you get a paying job".

You can find out about different kinds of jobs.

I wondered, "How do I find places where I can volunteer?"

Then one day, my neighbours needed someone to babysit their children.

"I can do it," I said.

I felt happy to help my neighbours. I learned how to take care of children and be patient.

Babysitting

On another day, I helped with a fundraising project at school. We had a bake sale to raise money.

I made many new friends that day. I learned how to add prices quickly and make change.

Next, I volunteered to help create a wall mural for the new Family Centre. I learned how to work as part of a team, and how to paint!

This summer, I had my first job interview. It was easy to talk about myself and my skills because of my volunteering experiences.

Job Interview

I got the job right away.
Everyone was right about volunteering. It helped me to get my first paying job and I felt great about helping my community.
I am so happy!

Glossary

experience	things you learn from doing
fundraising	raise money to help others
job interview	when you talk to someone to get a job
volunteering	doing helpful work without pay

Financial Literacy

Financial Skills

- Learn new work related skills: teamwork, communication, problem solving, project planning, task management and organization
- Try different kinds of jobs
- Expand social network
- Increase self-confidence

Building Financial Knowledge

Volunteering is a great way for students to gain Canadian work experience and skills in a non-threatening situation. Volunteering can teach students valuable job skills and can provide career experiences. Employers and college admissions often expect to see examples of volunteering experience on résumés and applications.
